Time for lunch

Residents of Lockner Estate celebrate the Big Lunch 2014 with a homemade cake

COMMUNITIES across Hackney came together to celebrate International Neighbours Day and The Big Lunch.

Residents shared food, played games and listened to live music on 31 May and 1 June. Hobbs Place Estate held a tea party with sports day style events, while Lockner Estate celebrated with an inflatable slide and a DJ to entertain youngsters with musical bumps and other games. The parties were supported by Hackney Homes. Chair of its board, Rupert Tyson, said: "Events such as these allow neighbours to come together, encouraging community spirit." For more info and pictures, see page 2.

Hackney Today is published by the London Borough of Hackney. It has a print run of 108,000 copies and is delivered free to every home and business in the borough. The Council uses it to communicate public service information to residents. It is published fortnightly in order to carry statutory advertising, such as planning and traffic notices, which is cheaper for the taxpayer than using another local paper. The law does not allow for statutory notices to be published solely online or in a less frequent publication.

The paper's official, door-to-door delivery is 90,821 copies per issue, according to Audit Bureau of Circulations (ABC)

Good neighbours

REIDENTS across Hackney's estates had fun in the sun as they celebrated International Neighbours Day and The Big Lunch.

People came together on 31 May and 1 June to enjoy live music, play games and share food with their neighbours.

There were lots of activities across the estates, including face-painting, bouncy castles, dancing competitions, races and seed planting in several of the communal gardens.

Caroline Hattab, chair of Fields Estate

“A good time was had by all and the food was all gone by the end of the day”

Tenants' and Residents' Association, said: "A good time was had by all and the food was all gone by the end of the day. We had a lot of children this year and a nice balance of tenants and leaseholders. Everyone loved our wishing wall idea, which allowed residents to tie papers to the fence with ideas of what they wanted to see improved on the estate."

Hobbs Place Estate held a tea party with sports day-style events.

Lockner Estate had an inflatable slide and hired a DJ to entertain the youngsters with musical bumps and other games.

All the events were supported by Hackney Homes. Chair of the board, Rupert Tyson, said: "Events such as these allow neighbours to come together, encouraging community spirit."

Thousands of Big Lunches have taken place across the UK since the scheme was launched in 2009. Neighbours Day began in Paris in 2000 and is celebrated worldwide in a bid to encourage neighbours to get to know each other better.

Run Hackney is a new half marathon that will affect many roads and transport on the morning of Sunday 22 July

THE first ever Run Hackney half marathon takes place on Sunday, 22 July, with over 12,000 people taking part, most of them running for a charitable cause.

The 13.1 mile race starts at Hackney Marshes and takes in a number of the borough's landmarks including Hackney Empire and Hackney Town Hall.

Thousands of supporters are expected to come out to encourage runners, adding to the electric atmosphere.

Spectator points for the Council-backed event will be located at Hackney Downs, Stonebridge Gardens, Broadway Market, Well Street Common, Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park, and Mabley Green.

The prime spot for watching the racers start and finish will be at the southern end of Hackney Marshes. There will be entertainment on the day and stalls selling food and drink.

Look out for marshals wearing bright orange T-shirts who will be happy to answer questions and help with directions.

Run Dem Crew, a community running group formed by DJ Charlie Dark, will be providing pacers to help racers hit their goal finish time.

Roads throughout the borough will be closed on the day from 7am to 1pm. The majority of runners are expected to cross the finish line between 11am and 11.30am. Those who finish after this time will be asked to run on the pavement.

Run Hackney has a number of official charity partners, including Cancer Research UK, East End Community Foundation, British Heart Foundation and sports charity Laureus.

Limited edition shopping bags

SHOPPERS at Hackney's street markets can pick up a special limited edition tote bag designed by some of the borough's finest creatives.

As part of the 'Love Hackney, Shop Local' campaign, the offer is open to shoppers spending £5 or more at participating markets on four dates: bags designed by Tessa Edwards will be available at Hoxton Street Market on 21 June; by Silken Favours at Chatsworth Market on 22 June; by Agi and Sam at Ridley Road Market on 27 June; and by Barley Massey at Broadway Market on 28 June. Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This is just one example of the creative talent on offer at Hackney's vibrant markets."

Hackney Marshes Centre, E9

2012 Winner

Architect: Stanton Williams

This building is embedded into the landscape and minimises its impact on the site. The architecture is 'tough' and the judges described it as a building that 'feels at one with its setting'. It is a welcoming and high quality building using tough materials to withstand the knocks and bumps of its use as a community sports facility.

The Urswick School, E9

People's Choice Winner

Architect: Avanti

The school was built in two phases that are reflected in its design. The Urswick is an example of a well-considered functional building with high quality robust detailing achieved on a tight budget. Its planning is simple and rational, creating calm, light-filled spaces and rooms with a roof lit gym as a centrepiece.

THE search is on for Hackney's best new buildings and public spaces, with the return of the Hackney Design Awards.

People are being urged to nominate a building or place they believe is of high quality design for the biannual awards. Types of eligible projects would include residential, commercial, community, educational or industrial sites. Alterations to existing buildings can also be nominated, such as extensions, refurbishments, conversions or restorations. Public realm projects are also eligible for selection.

Entries will be short-listed and judged by an independent panel of architects and designers and the awards will be announced in November.

This is the fifth Hackney Design Awards, held by the Council every two years to illustrate its commitment to the promotion and celebration of high quality design within the borough.

In 2012, 19 buildings and public spaces were shortlisted for the awards.

Patrick Richard, director of Stanton Williams architects, one of the winners in the 2012 awards for the Hackney Marshes Centre, said: "We were honoured to receive the award as both recognition for the success of the building, the benefit and enjoyment it provides for the local community, and the demonstration of our commitment to high quality design, realisation and value for our clients."

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, added: "The Hackney Design Awards are one of the many ways the Council ensures that new buildings and public spaces meet our aspirations for a sustainable and liveable Hackney."

To be eligible, buildings must have been completed no earlier than 1 August 2012, and be fully functioning by 14 July.

2012 Winner

Architect: Make

Located in Hackney Wick and nicknamed the 'Copper Box', the Handball Arena is the third largest indoor arena in London. Completed for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, it now provides flexible recreation space for the community and sports events. The judges said the building is an 'example of order with beautifully finished concrete structural fin columns and a simple palette of colours and high quality materials'.

Older residents take part in the New Age Games, an opportunity to stay in shape with activities such as pilates, walking football, yoga and zumba

Fighting fit at 50+

ARCERY, mountain biking and pilates are among the activities on offer during the current season of the New Age Games for residents aged 50 and over.

The activity programme began in 2011 and 500 people are now registered with the scheme.

The free fitness sessions are held at leisure centres, parks and other venues across the borough.

Annie Mangion, 75, is now a regular mountain biker.

She said: "The New Age Games have given me a new lease of life after recovering from cancer twice and a stroke. It gives people something to focus on and look forward to. I have never felt so fit."

“The New Age Games have given me a new lease of life. I have never felt so fit”

Abigail Omilade, from Shoreditch, added: "The New Age Games have saved my life. I have met many friends, learned more and it has reduced my blood pressure, glucose levels and levels of depression."

A recent survey showed that 99.6 per cent of participants would recommend the scheme to a friend, stating it helped improve their quality of life, including increased happiness, ability to socialise and improved self-confidence.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Over the years, the New Age Games have proved very popular with hundreds of over-50s who have tried new sports and activities. I'm delighted to see that, no matter what their interests or ability, the games are a place to have fun, meet new people and get active."

The latest programme of activities began in May and will run Monday to Saturday until November, with a break between 27 July and 31 August.

All sessions are led by qualified instructors.

Anyone wanting to join should turn up 10 minutes before classes to register. Places are allocated on a first-come first-served basis.

To improve health and wellbeing, the Department of Health recommends at least two-and-a-half hours of moderate intensity activity per week, in bouts of 10 minutes or more; or 30 minutes, five days a week. Inactivity can lead to long-term complications such as heart disease, stroke, diabetes and cancer.

Tour de France road closures

THE Tour de France will be speeding through Hackney next month and Transport for London (TfL) is holding an information session on how travel will be affected.

On 7 July, competitors in the world famous race will ride from Cambridge to London, passing through East London, and finishing in The Mall. This forms part of the first three stages of the tour – known as the Grand Depart – which takes place in the UK this year.

Affected roads will be closed from 10am to about 6pm. There will be significant disruption and delays to road and bus transport across the capital.

In Hackney, the A106 Ruckholt Road/Eastway will be closed between Orient Way and Lee Conservancy Road, with no access to, or from, the A12 at the Lee Interchange. Waterden Road will also be closed.

The information session will take place on 17 June in Hackney Town Hall, from 4.30pm to 7.30pm. People will be able to view detailed maps of the route and associated road closures, and ask TfL staff any questions. For more info, visit: www.tfl.gov.uk/tourdefrance

Boost for business broadband

HACKNEY firms can now claim vouchers worth up to £3,000 to upgrade their internet service to business-grade broadband.

The voucher connection scheme is open to enterprises with up to 250 employees. The aim is to help local small to medium sized businesses boost the speed of their broadband connection to 30gbps.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration, said: "Most businesses are on up to 17mbps speed, which is actually a domestic service masquerading as a business service and is nothing like as reliable as the new services on offer through this scheme, which are true business-grade offerings."

The Council is helping promote the scheme by holding a launch event during London Technology Week, at BL_NK in Shoreditch on 17 June, between 8.30am and 11am. Internet service providers will be on hand to answer questions and businesses can decide which, if any, they want to take a contract out with.

There is also the option for companies to team up and split the cost of upgrading.

Photographer Colin O'Brien documents a changing city through more than six decades

A NEW exhibition, featuring images charting the changing face of the capital since the end of the Second World War is set to open this month.

'London Life: Photographs by Colin O'Brien' captures city life from 1948 to the present.

Born in Clerkenwell, Colin began photographing his local stomping ground from the age of eight, focusing on scenes that came to epitomise the lean years in the aftermath of war.

At the age of 15, Colin's parents bought him a Leica camera and since then he has devoted his time to taking photographs that serve as a social documentary of a specific time and place.

Colin moved to Hackney in 1984 and turned his lens to subjects including the travellers who lived in caravans around Martello Street, London Fields. He spent three weeks gaining the families' trust in 1987 and photographing children from their community.

Colin has created a vast library of negatives, and continues to shoot on film which he still processes himself in a dark room.

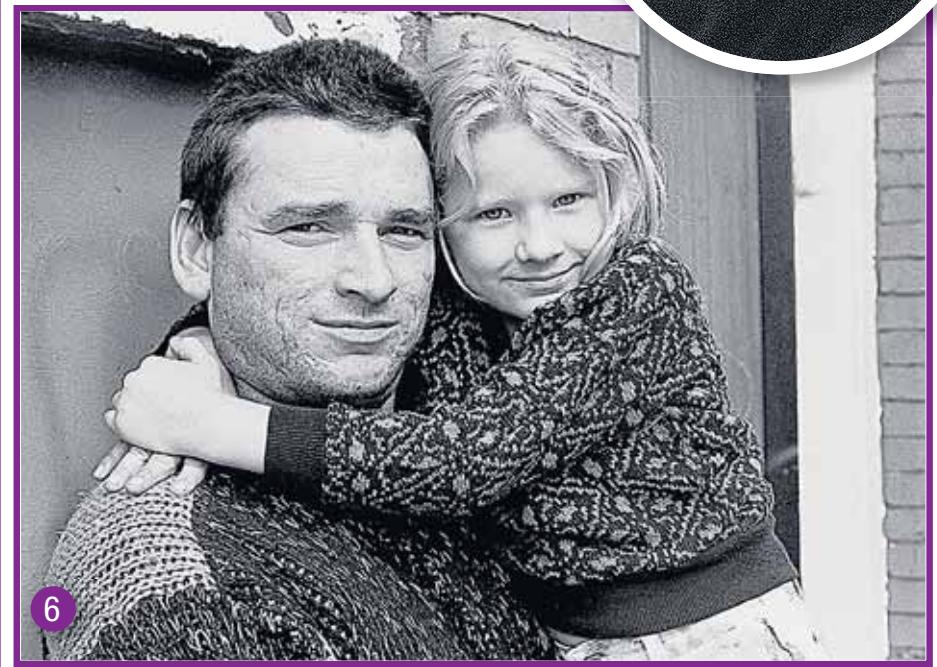

A selection of between 60 to 70 of these images will be shown in the

Colin said: "I am excited by the prospect of showing my work here and look forward to what I hope will be an exciting, engaging and stimulating exhibition."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, added: "Supporting local people to capture history and social change is exactly what a place like Hackney Museum does."

"Colin's work spans 60 years and really highlights the changes in Hackney, and how the borough has become one of the most diverse and colourful places in London."

The free exhibition runs from 24 June until September.

The museum will host a book signing and talk by Colin about his social documentation of London and Hackney on 10 July, from 6.30pm to 8pm. He will also be on hand to sign copies of his publications.

ACTOR Paul Bradley shot to fame in the mid-90s portraying the hapless, bad shirt-wearing Nigel Bates in EastEnders, but he is more recently recognisable as the eccentric, but brilliant surgeon Dr Elliot Hope in BBC1's 'Holby City'.

When he's not acting, Paul performs in bizarre jazz band hKippers, who are celebrating their 25th birthday this year. (The 'h' is silent.) Paul 'plays' Sellotape and guitar alongside Oscar-winning composer Stephen Warbeck and Pogues drummer Andrew Ranken. Paul describes their sound as 'stupid world music'.

"The band is made up of talented musicians, and I'm the least gifted of the bunch," says Paul. Adding: "A music journalist said in a review that I sang like a lorry driver... I took that as a compliment."

Paul has lived in Hackney since 1989, and the Stoke Newington-based band has played alongside the likes of John Otway and John Etheridge, at respected music venues including Hackney's Vortex and Café Oto.

But it was acting that was always Paul's first love. "That was all I was ever going to do, whether I was successful or not. I was a show-off as a child," he says.

Paul studied drama at Manchester University alongside Adrian Edmondson and Rik Mayall, and later joined

A true EastEnder

Paul Bradley found fame as Nigel Bates in the BBC's EastEnders before joining Holby City as eccentric cardiothoracic surgeon Dr Elliot Hope them on TV sitcom 'Bottom' as a burglar who was Sellotaped to the ceiling, a scene written to mirror Paul's own enthusiasm for the adhesive.

His first big TV break came when a director friend offered him a bit part on EastEnders, playing a friend to Phil and Grant Mitchell.

"At the BBC, you can buy your outfit from

I consider myself extremely fortunate that I've got a full-time job. I never take it for granted the costume department after you've done your scene, but the guy in the department wouldn't sell me my clothes," Paul explains. Adding: "He said it was because he thought I'd be coming back, and he was right. At the time, I was boracic [rhyming slang – boracic lint: skint], and my wife said I didn't have any choice but to take the role."

Paul was a fixture in the soap for five years, but fame came at a price. He admits it became difficult to go out in public and the attention could be 'frightening'.

Weird similarities with the show and his own life also started to develop.

He says: "I found myself going to the doctor and it was like going to see Dr Legg [former EastEnders character]. I had friends who lived in Fassett Square, which is the place that the fictional Albert Square was based on. And the location of Phil's garage was based on the arches at Mentmore Terrace."

In 2005, Paul auditioned for a small role in Holby City and impressed the producers so much they created the role of Dr

Hope just for him.

"I consider myself extremely fortunate that I've got a full-time job," he muses. "I never take it for granted."

Holby fans will know that Dr Hope has not had an easy time on the show. His wife died, his son and daughter were both shot in separate incidents, and his dog was run over by an ambulance. The character's own health then took a turn for the worst, but Paul is assured he will remain in Holby for the time being: "I'm not dying soon!"

Paul originally lived in Dalston, before moving two roads away to Stoke Newington. He revels in the area's long history of non-conformity and lists Abney Park Cemetery, Springfield Park and the canal paths and cycle rides as some of his favourite Hackney hidden gems.

He says of his chosen home: "I believe you pick your village."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: My boyfriend is super sporty and goes through a lot of spray deodorant. I use roll on as I think it's better for the environment. He thinks I'm wrong because he puts his empty aerosol cans in the recycling. Which is best?

A: He's right that he can recycle his aerosol cans, but you can also put your empty roll on bottles in the recycling too. So no difference there.

Some brands now use smaller deodorant cans which contain the same amount of spray as larger ones.

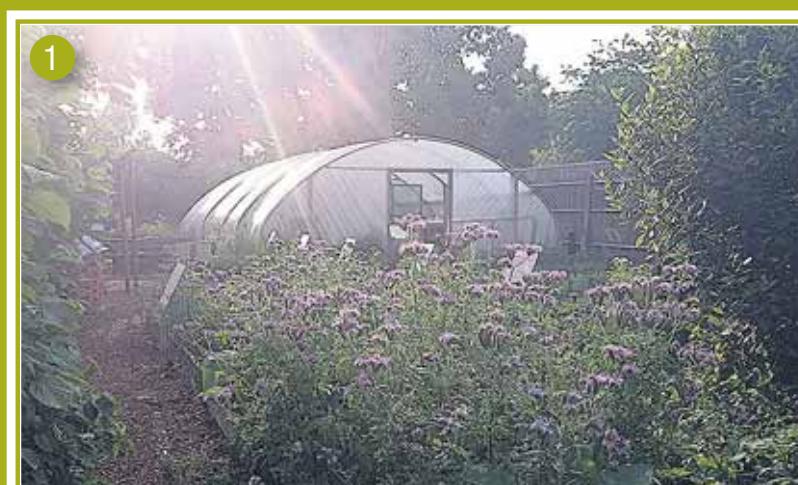

These new-look cans use an average of 25 per cent less aluminium, so if he wants to stick with the sprays maybe you could get him to use the new smaller cans.

1. Clissold Park; 2. Free snacks made with seasonal vegetables by Growing Communities; 3. Fresh veg

Local taste of summer

HACKNEY-based organisation Growing Communities is offering residents the chance to sample free food made with seasonal vegetables then learn how to prepare them at home.

Visitors will be able to try dips, cakes and other dishes made with organic ingredients produced at Growing Communities' urban market gardens in and around Hackney.

The series of free seasonal tasters begins on 11 June at Chats Palace, Brooksby's Walk, E9. Further events will take place on 19 June at Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, and 26 June at The Russet, Hackney Downs.

“Growing local food close to where it will be eaten is a key part of Growing Communities’ aim to change the food system”

Organiser Fiona McAllister, who also works at Hackney Growers' Kitchen, a partnership that sells seasonal food at Stoke Newington Farmers' Market, said: “We want to show people how to make delicious affordable meals with local, seasonal produce. We'll also give away recipe sheets to inspire people to try making the dishes for themselves.”

Growing Communities is also set to hold a market garden stall in Clissold Park, during the park's 125th birthday celebrations, on 21 June. As well as trying seasonal goods, visitors will be able to buy a bag of organic Hackney salad, look round the garden and get growing tips from the experts who work there.

One grower, Paul Bradbury, said: “Growing delicious local food really close to where it will be eaten is a key part of Growing Communities' aim to change the food system into one that's more sustainable.”

New peace garden unveiled at the Peabody Trust Pembury estate, E5

A NEW peace garden has been unveiled on Pembury Estate, E5, (pictured right) to honour the memory of three former residents.

The garden features benches donated by housing charity Peabody, as well as trees and a long table given by the National Trust.

Peabody worked with a number of organisations to bring the project to life, including members of Pembury Youth Club, Hackney National Trust Gardeners, and Gingko Landscaping.

Abidemi Lawal, Peabody's neighbourhood manager, said: “We are proud to be part of a resident-led initiative which offers a tranquil environment for neighbours, while honouring the memory of Myrtle Henry, Marylyn Emons and Zena Walters, who did so much for their community.”

Errol Williams, son of Ms Henry, attended the event on 15 May.

He said: “My mum would have been very happy with this honour. I would like to thank Peabody for this project and taking time to do this in memory of my mum.”

PREVIEW*LIFT Festival 2014*Until 29 June, various locations

London International Festival of Theatre (LIFT) returns with stories from across the globe to transform the capital's stages. In this 20th edition, there are 30 boundary-pushing shows, including two in Hackney. 'Turfed' will be showing at Hackney Downs Studios on 9 to 21 June. Through football, it explores the global issue of youth homelessness under the direction of Renato Rocha. Some of the young cast have themselves experienced homelessness in London, Brazil, Tanzania and the Philippines. The production was created in partnership with Save the Children's Street Child World Cup initiative.

Another production, 'Some People Think I'm

Bonkers, But I Just Think I'm Free', will be performed at The Yard Theatre on 18 June. Yesterday's eccentricity has a funny way of becoming today's common sense, and this production is a celebration of people who campaign for questionable things. Compered by comedian Ivor Dembina, the show also features Henry Hemming, author of 'In Search Of The English Eccentric'; Ellie Harrison who runs Bring Back British Rail; British Naturists; Wessex Regionalist Party's Colin Bex, Campaign for Greater London National Park; and Trenton Oldfield, who disrupted the Boat Race in 2012 in a bid to 'end elitism'.

RUN: Dancer Master

Hang-Up Gallery, 56 Stoke Newington High St, N16 7BP, 21 June-9 August

STREET artist RUN, whose bright, humanistic prints are seen on walls across the globe, has created a vibrant exhibition exclusively for Stoke Newington's Hang-Up Gallery. 'Dancer Master' is a multi-media installation that celebrates painting, rhythm, body language and dynamism. The title of the show was inspired by a statue at a Hindu temple in Colombo with the same name.

RUN said: "The statue was beautiful; full of colours, with hands and arms that were made to give the viewer the impression of a dance of the spirit."

His recognisable style shows a level of detail and complexity rarely seen in street art today. Look out for many of the Italian-born artist's wall paintings in Hackney.

For more information, visit: www.hanguppictures.com, or call: 020 3667 4552.

Geek out at HUTC

“There are some talented kids at the college – the digital entrepreneurs of the future”

AS technology becomes more essential to our daily lives, the way children are being educated is changing.

The national curriculum now states every five- to 16-year-old must learn how to write code for computer programming.

Hackney University Technical College has been quick to get on board with these changes, developing a programme aimed at 11- to 19-year-olds, to enhance their understanding of digital career opportunities.

It is hosting a series of ‘Geek Out’ events that are an opportunity to hear from professionals in a range of creative industries at workshops and talks. The line-up includes graphic artists, film-makers, app creators, 3D print makers, game designers, music technologists and more.

Tim Diggins, director of Red56, runs coding and 3D printing sessions as part of Geek Out.

He said: “The college was buzzing. There are some talented kids there – the digital entrepreneurs of the future. The speed they pick up new information is impressive. Those who are new to the geek world got a lot out of the day too.”

The next Geek Out event takes place on 18 June, from 4pm to 7pm, at Hackney University Technical College, Basing Place, E1 8AA. For more info, visit: www.hackneyutc.co.uk

Adult Learners’ Week returns offering residents the chance to gain new skills

IT’S never too late to learn, as hundreds of places on free taster courses are up for grabs as part of Adult Learners’ Week in Hackney.

The packed programme includes baking, circus arts, healthy cooking, public speaking, floristry, first aid and sign language classes.

Those wanting to boost their tech skills can sign up to an introduction to using the internet, e-mail, smartphones and iPads, or find out how to design a website and how to use Photoshop. Parents can also learn how to keep themselves and their children safe online.

The free taster sessions are run by education and learning providers at venues across the borough, brought together by the Council’s Adult Learning Services department.

Dionne Thomas, 35, took part last year. She said: “It is a fantastic opportunity to be creative. I hope to set up my own business in the future working with young people helping them to explore ways of being creative and Adult Learners’ Week helped to give me so many new ideas. I made new friends and it was a great networking opportunity.”

The week will kick off with a launch event on 14 June from 11.30am to 3.30pm outside Hackney Learning Trust, 1 Reading Lane. It will include live music, circus acts, a steel pan performance and African dancing. Staff from Hackney Learning Trust will be on hand to offer advice about courses.

Head start at Circle

Circle Sports has opened its second store, and first in Hackney, to give young people a head start in their careers

AN AWARD-WINNING sports shop that gives young people training and support opened a new store in Dalston on 5 June.

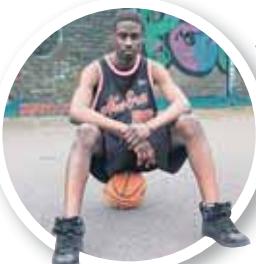

Circle Sports is a social enterprise that works with young people across London who may never have been employed due to problems in their home or school life.

It provides practical training and education to boost career prospects.

Revenue from the sale

“Our mission has always been to get young people into jobs”

of sports clothes and equipment goes back into developing the programme, which has been praised by TV's 'Queen of Shops' Mary Portas, and won the backing of major corporate sponsors such as John Lewis, Fujitsu and BP.

The first store launched in Westminster in 2010 and has since employed 60 young people, with a 90 per cent retention rate.

Founder Turly

Humphreys said: "Our mission has always been to get young people into jobs. With the support of all our generous partners, we're enabling them to learn the vital skills they need through non-academic channels to be confident and gain financial independence."

"The icing on the cake for us is seeing them come back and mentor our new cohorts."

Circle Sports Dalston is at 136 Kingsland High Street, E8 2NS.

News in brief

Young people take food from field to table with Root Camp

CELEBRITY chefs joined members of the restaurant trade at the launch of a project to inspire teenagers to learn about food production from field to table.

TV cook Valentine Warner, restaurateur and author Prue Leith, and chef Sylvain Jamois attended the Root Camp event at Hackney Community College's Open Kitchen on 20 May. They enjoyed food cooked by HCC students and former project participants.

As part of Root Camp, every summer, young people aged 15 to 21 travel to the Welsh countryside and spend a week working with chefs, learning to cook for half a day, and then spending the other half doing activities such as foraging, planting, fishing or harvesting.

The event at HCC was supported by Weber Grills, Hiver Beer, Blackdown Spirits and supermarket giant Ocado. To find out more about Root Camp, including how to take part, visit: www.rootcamp.co.uk

Local students shine as they screen short films at Adobe Youth Voices event

Dylan Ferner-Rose and Buki Osofisan from Hackney Youth Parliament

HACKNEY students had the opportunity to show off their digital media skills to hundreds of people at BFI Southbank.

The event on 22 May showcased the work of young people from across the capital who took part in this year's Adobe Youth Voices (AYV) programme, co-ordinated by Eastside Educational Trust (EET).

AYV Live! featured a range of different digital media produced by young people including documentaries, music videos, poster campaigns, animation and photography. The projects were all on topics that the young people felt passionate about.

William Smith and Georgia Turner, both 14, from Stoke Newington School presented their short film '#reelgenerations', which examined stereotypes about older and younger generations.

Dylan Ferner-Rose, 13, and Buki Osofisan, 17, from Hackney Youth Parliament introduced their piece 'Work Experience' that looked at some of the issues young people face.

EET's director and London's AYV co-ordinator, Rakhee Jasani, said: "London's youth want to be heard and we are extremely proud of what they have achieved."

The application process for AYV 2014/15 is now open to schools and youth groups. To take part, e-mail: online@eastside.org.uk, or call: 020 7033 2380.

City and Hackney
Clinical Commissioning Group

City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group Champion for patients and the public

We are looking for a new Lay Member to join our Board and to be a strong champion for patients and the public in City and Hackney.

We are determined that patients and the public will have a real say in the services which we commission for them – our philosophy is "You said – and we did!"

As a full member of the Board, you will contribute to the development of our strategy and to the leadership of the organisation making sure that our decisions are the right ones for our patients and communities.

You will chair the Public and Patient Involvement (PPI) sub-committee of the Board and lead on public and patient involvement throughout the CCG. You will attend the Clinical Executive Committee and you will be a member of the CCG Remuneration and audit Committees bringing an important lay balance to our clinical work.

We are looking for someone who:

- Has their roots deep in our local communities.
- Has the skills and experience needed to play a leadership role in a small but complex organisation – including chairing skills.
- Is passionate about making sure the voice of patients and the public are heard.
- Has some knowledge and experience of how the NHS and the wider health and social care system works.

Typically the post will need you to commit about 5 half days each month and the pay is currently £18,000 a year paid on a monthly basis.

If you think you might be the right person to champion our patients and our public, please contact Karl Thompson (karl.thompson@nhs.net) for an information pack. If you would like to have an informal discussion about the role, please contact Clare Highton, CCG Clinical Chair on clare.highton@nhs.net or Paul Haigh, CCG Chief Officer, on paul.haigh@nhs.net

Inna Vision Film School gives African and Caribbean people with mental health problems the opportunity to create interesting films

Mental health film project

A FILM school that works with people with mental health problems is screening a number of shorts as part of the East End Film Festival (EEFF).

The Inna Vision Film School is a year-long partnership between four East London organisations, focusing on mental health issues within African and Caribbean communities.

Loud Minority, a Hackney-based filmmaking and production company led by Bhavesh Hindocha and Geoff Johnston, collaborated on the project with London Fields-based developmental charity Social Action for Health; mental health group East London Hopefuls; and charity Mellow, which runs arts programmes for the African and Caribbean community.

“We’re challenging taboos around mental health, with creative work that can surprise, engage and inform”

Bhavesh said: “It’s been a fantastic experience working with such an amazing group of people. We’re challenging taboos around mental health, with creative work that can surprise, engage and inform people to create a better understanding of what mental health means to us all, as it’s part of the human condition.”

The EEFF is showing five short films made by Inna Vision students at Genesis cinema in Whitechapel on 14 June. The films will also be screened for free in Hackney on:

■ 25 June, 7.30pm: The Russet, 17 Amhurst Terrace, E8 2BT

■ 28 June, 7pm: Hundred Years Gallery, 13 Pearson St, E2 8JD

■ 6 July, 5pm: Passing Clouds, 1 Richmond Rd, E8 4AA.

The project was funded by Time To Change, a national campaign to challenge mental health stigma.

Free events at St Joseph's Hospice to mark national Carers' Week

ST JOSEPH'S Hospice is hosting a week of free events to mark national Carers' Week from 9 to 15 June.

The Hackney Annual Carers' Conference takes place on 10 June, from 10.30am to 3.30pm. It is an opportunity to meet other carers and find out about the support services in the borough.

On 11 June, style consultant Kathy Ennis will host a colour therapy session. It is billed as a fun, interactive workshop, which demonstrates how colour can lift people's mood.

Wellness Day on 13 June focuses on health and nutrition. Free workshops on laughter yoga, chi gung, meditation and relaxation aim to help ease the pressures on those who care for others. Experts will be on hand throughout the day and a nutritious free lunch will be served.

Charlotte Griffin, marketing manager for St Joseph's Hospice, said: “Our quest during this week is not only to promote the support and various services available from St Joseph's for carers, but to encourage carers to find the time to focus on themselves and their wellbeing – to ensure they are fit, healthy and strong, both mentally and physically to meet the demands of being a carer.”

For more information on the events, call: 020 8525 3139, or e-mail: c.griffin@stjh.org.uk

The events aim to encourage carers to focus on themselves

News in brief

Help for new parents worried about their baby's crying

NEW mums and dads in Hackney are being offered a helping hand to cope with the first months of parenthood. Hackney is one of just 20 local authorities to invite parents to a view a 10-minute film called 'Coping with Crying'.

A newborn's regular crying can be very distressing for parents, but that tends to peak at six to eight weeks. The film looks at why babies cry and gives practical techniques for dealing with it.

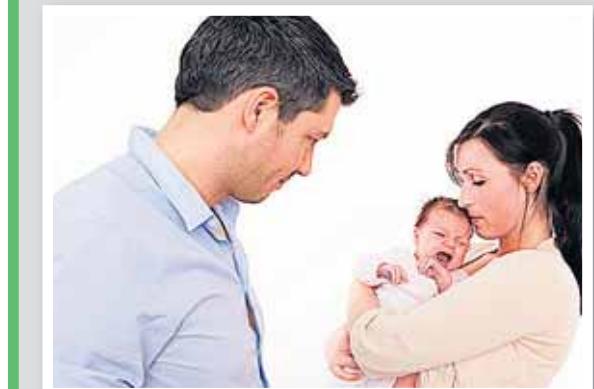

Health visitors and children's centres will invite parents to screenings in small groups. The sessions also give them the chance to share their experiences.

The video is produced by children's charity NSPCC, and will initially be shown at Lubavitch, Thomas Fairchild and Linden Children's Centres, and Lower Clapton and Nightingale GP practices, with additional screenings over the summer.

Angela Scattergood, Head of Early Years at Hackney Learning Trust, said: “Having a newborn in the house can be overwhelming; the pressures of becoming a parent along with the sleepless nights can be really tough. Concerns about babies crying are one of the most common reasons that new parents seek help from professionals.

“This film offers guidance on how to cope with the stress and also how to soothe your baby. I’m pleased we’re able to show this film to our new mums and dads and offer another layer of support at a really important time.”

For more information, speak to your health visitor or children's centre. To find out more about the services on offer at children's centres, visit: www.learningtrust.co.uk/childrens\_centres

The changing faces of Thomas Manton

By Sally England

THE 18th century song 'The Vicar of Bray' satirises a Berkshire rector who changed his principles, during the religious upheavals of the 16th and 17th centuries, in order to keep his position.

Presbyterian clergyman Thomas Manton (1620-1677), who held the living of St Mary's Stoke Newington between 1645 and 1656, followed a similar path. He worked with both Oliver Cromwell and Charles II, although unlike the Vicar of Bray, Manton was at one point imprisoned for his beliefs.

Manton was born in Somerset, educated in Tiverton and Oxford, and ordained as a deacon in 1640. He returned to the West Country for his first ministries in Devon, although he never actually took orders as a priest, insisting that he was already sufficiently ordained for his role. The English Civil War broke out in 1642, and in 1645 Manton was proposed by the Cromwellian Colonel Alexander Popham, who held the manor of Stoke Newington, for the living at St Mary's to replace the Royalist William Heath.

Manton was careful to steer a course between what he described as 'forbidding Rigours and rapturous Pretensions' but was not afraid to stand up for what he believed in. He preached before Parliament on numerous occasions and served as Cromwell's chaplain, but also opposed the execution of Charles I in 1649.

In 1651, Manton attended fellow Presbyterian minister, Christopher Love, at his beheading on Tower Hill for involvement in a plot to restore Charles II. Love was so grateful that he gave his cloak to Manton, who subsequently insisted on preaching Love's funeral sermon despite the anger of Cromwell's government and threats by soldiers to shoot him should he go ahead.

During his time at Stoke Newington, Manton embarked on a long series of mid-week lectures on the subjects of Isaiah, St James and St Jude.

Copies of some of these, along with a number of Manton's sermons are now held at the Hackney Archives.

In 1656, Manton left St Mary's to become rector of St Paul's, Covent Garden. Two years later Cromwell died, and along with other Presbyterians, Manton believed that the restoration of the monarchy was necessary to help stabilise the confused and uncertain state that the country found itself in. He was part of the delegation that went to Breda in The Netherlands to finalise terms for the exiled Charles II to return to England and resume the throne. At this point he became the king's personal chaplain.

The Act of Uniformity of 1662 required that all ministers be re-ordained by a bishop under the terms of the new Book of Common Prayer. Along with over 2,000 other nonconformist ministers, Manton refused to take the oath, and so was forced to leave St Paul's. He continued to preach in private, but in 1670 was seized under the Conventional Act of 1664 which forbade dissenting religious gatherings of more than five people which did not abide by the laws of the Church of England.

Manton was imprisoned for six months in the old Gatehouse Prison at Westminster Abbey, although he seems to have been well-treated by the keeper, Lady Broughton, who even let him out to visit his friends in Stoke Newington.

Manton died in 1677, and despite having left the Church of England because of his nonconformist beliefs, he was buried in the chancel of St Mary's.

Curiously, there is another connection between the old song and Stoke Newington. In 1882, a comic opera version of 'The Vicar of Bray', written by Sydney Grundy and Edward Solomon, opened in London. Grundy's libretto transposed the story from Bray

Tarte à la tomate

Serves 8

Ingredients

- 100g butter
- 75ml cold water
- 200g plain flour
- 2 tbsp whole grain mustard
- 100g cheese (gruyère, comté or emmental)
- 4 or 5 ripe tomatoes
- olive oil
- fresh thyme
- black olives (optional).

Method

For the pastry:

- Melt the butter. Add cold water and flour (don't mix/stir too much)
- Spread the dough in a pie dish

This recipe comes from Lucie Galand, who is a cook for North London Action for the Homeless. Twice a week, Lucie and a group of volunteers transform donated fruit and veg into a three-course meal for up to 80 service users. Meals are served in the welcoming church hall at St Paul's West Hackney, N16.

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
30 mins

- with your fingers. Leave in the fridge for 20 minutes. Flatten the base with your fingers, and prick the bottom with a fork
- Heat the oven to 200°C and bake blind for 10 minutes (to bake blind, line the pastry with tin foil and weigh it down with dried beans or ceramic weights).
- For the filling: Allow the pastry base to cool and then spread with mustard
- Cover the mustard with a layer of grated cheese. Slice the tomatoes and arrange them on top in a spiral. Drizzle with olive oil and sprinkle with fresh thyme. Season with salt and pepper
- Bake for 15-20 minutes. Top with black olives and serve.

Eat Hackney Cookbook features 30 great recipes from restaurants, cafés and community projects in Hackney. Proceeds go to the Hackney Migrant Centre and North London Action for the Homeless, who feed 100 vulnerable people each week in the borough.

Improvements to Broadway Market entrance

RESIDENTS are being asked for their views on planned improvements to the entrance to London Fields at the top of Broadway Market.

New public toilets opened in London Fields this April following an earlier consultation. Further works are now proposed to improve access to the toilets; modernise the park entrance, which is in need of repair; incorporate new flower beds; and level out access, while improving the definition between pedestrian and cycling routes into the park.

London Fields is common land, which has a greater level of protection from development than other parks and green spaces. Consent from the Planning Inspectorate will be required before any redevelopment can go ahead.

The Council would like to assess support for its proposals before submitting an application to the Planning Inspectorate.

To make their views known, residents can attend a drop-in event in London Fields, close to the Broadway Market entrance, on 19 June, from 8.30am to 2pm; and on 21 June, from 11am to 4pm. Or complete an online survey at: www.hackney.gov.uk/londonfields

New design for Stonebridge Gardens

PEOPLE who use Stonebridge Gardens can have their say on revised design proposals for the park by Haggerston station.

A range of improvements are being considered including better access, play opportunities for older children, and extended planting beds.
